More than 12 million Africans were shipped to the New World during the peak of the slave trade, but the vast majority — almost 11 million — were taken to the Caribbean and Latin America and kept in bondage longer than slaves in the United States. Renowned Harvard scholar Henry Louis Gates, Jr. reveals this untold story and its lasting cultural impact in Black in Latin America, a four-part series premiering on WLIW21 this month.

With the broadcast of African American Lives in 2006, Professor Gates made history as the first filmmaker to employ genealogy and genetic science to provide an understanding of African American history. In Black in Latin America, Professor Gates visits Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Cuba, Brazil, Mexico, and Peru to discover how Latin Americans of African descent live, how their countries acknowledge — or deny — their African past and how race and African ancestry influence the multicultural worlds of the Caribbean and Latin America.

“Since the sixteenth century, the black presence has been inextricably intertwined in the cultures and economies of the six countries we examine in the series,” said Professor Gates. “This series is a journey of discovery, in which we unveil these often hidden worlds that black people created in countries we don’t think of as black. How many of us realize that black saints are worshipped in these countries, and that the first black president of any country in the New World was not Barack Obama, it was Vicente Guerrero, elected president of Mexico in 1829.”

“We’re particularly excited about this series because it breaks so much new ground,” said Stephen Segaller, Vice President of Content at WNET. “It serves the audience in two ways — bringing them material they won’t find anywhere else and presenting important stories about diverse communities in the Americas that will resonate with our own immensely diverse New York area audience.”

THE ZOO

The celebrated Zoological Society of London opens its doors to television cameras, allowing unprecedented and fascinating access to one of the world’s oldest menageries.

Viewers are guided through the daily responsibilities of the keepers and specialists for over 15,000 animals, including routine feedings, teeth cleanings, autopsies, and more. The Zoo explores issues such as balancing tight finances with plans for expansion, captive breeding programs, and “animal conservation.” It’s the animals, though, that are the documentary’s real stars. The average day depicted in The Zoo explores an array of emotions, from birth to death and from tragedy to joy.
